- (AROUND) ME

BIO

Born in 1989; as Maria Nova / NOVA 0.0.0.0. since 2018 (before Maria Śmiszek). Intermedia and performance artist, narrator. Graduate of Film Studies at the Jagiellonian University (2016, “The (un)ceasing histories. About the word, which enacts a work of art, about the word, which becomes a work of art”) and a MA candidate at the Faculty of Intermedia Art of the Academy of Fine Arts in Krakow (2021). S_he is inspired by the theme of identity: identity as an art medium, a construct or a product in a liquide modernity. In the year of 2018 s_he has officially changed her family name to the name of Nova, beginning the Nova house / line and created a character of NOVA 0.0.0.0. (self-created identity). In the years of 2018/2019 s_he completed foreign scholarships at the University of Arts in Berlin and at the University of Arts in Belgrade. In the year of 2020 s_he received the artistic scholarship in the Federal Country of Lower Austria.

S_he is the author of performances, video works, site-specific installations, conceptual choreographys, poetic and critical texts, actions in public and social space. S_he was showing her work and performanes during numerous international exhibitions and festivals in Poland, Serbia, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Slovakia. S_he was also involved in popularizing avant-garde cinema (an authorial series of shows of French avant-garde cinematography from the 1920s CINEMA AND WINE), she conducted lectures and workshops on performance art (ALEATORIC TRANS/ACTIONS) and published her works, a.o. in MultimediaGroup magazine. S_he is the co-author of the book of 1000 films that make up the cinema history.

STATEMENT

I am interested in the causative power of language in the context of interpersonal communication and the ways of building relationships through people, but also the status quo in works of art and the process of constructing identity. I explore themes in the NOVA 0.0.0.0 identity project and - also, recently - as if SUPERNOVA 2.0 ~ ecological collective identity, which poses a normative and formal experiment. I am acting within the areas of art such as - performance, video, site-specific installation, seance, narration, experience, identity, choreography - working with thought, word, gesture, body and object. The activities that inspire me the most are intercourse, conversation and interpersonal stimulation. I willingly apply cognitive experiments related to the boundaries between war and peace in the mental-physical sphere and in everyday life. I like to work inspired by specific places and circumstances. I only create works and / or situations, when their implementation feels necessary to me.

SUPERNOVA 2.0 manifesto
premiere during 9. Young Triennale in Orońsko

~ as if SUPERNOVA 2.0 | ecological collective identity on the need of creating self in the context of biocrises in realities

優 *not island not or undersleeping

if you're asleep, don't try to wake up / do you have dreams? perhaps you shouldn't maybe you shouldn't sleep lying / at least get up there's a serious problem*

I. Here is my home.

II. In my home, I practise biocreativity (especially growing ecoidentities and collecting biowords) and hosting guests, ecologically; 1: 1.

III. My bioprocesses are leisurely (prolonged moments of bodily, island-like insulation, inhabiting the mid forest or desert areas of the self) and consist with a minimum of actions. The action is generated by necessity: I only do what is happening. I deal with creating situations which from my perspective seem necessary – necessary in the face of ecology and / or choreography of the ego. My strategy is to act in a precisely defined place, time, and situation, assuming the largest possible annexation, taking its root in circumstances and existing things, including social ones: spontaneously established relations and interpersonal or inter-entity occurrences become matter, a material for action. I avoid producing material facts; when an army of non-existent wild forms is marching through my mind, I check which of them are true (important) and I look for homes for them in realities. I find ~

IV. ECO = from Greek οἶκος (oikos) home or the way a home functions. Linguistic nomadism, the necessity of living in new homes and islands, which is driven by crisis.

V. Ecological crisis (and the climate crisis associated with it) IS a crisis in the functioning of a home: it is multidimensional, it concerns social life at its source. In the Anthropocene, paradoxically, we have forgotten about ourselves, about home, the need to create networks, about interspecies equality: ecology towards the other, including the other in you. If we want, we can start the process of adjusting ourselves to life in the novacene*.

VI. Preventing climate disasters must exist concurrently with preventing disasters in the functioning of homes and islands, preventing interpersonal catastrophes, and more broadly – societal ones: building ecological identities and interpersonal and interspecies ecological relations based on ecological and economic communication is a NECESSITY and an OPPORTUNITY.

VII. SUPERNOVA 2.0 is a model identity of the novacene. It establishes the possibility to reflect on the idealistic pursuits of individuals within the framework of the visual postulate 'from ego to eco'. It is a contemporary social challenge (~ as if SUPERNOVA 2.0) in which we should not forget that plastic (!), viruses, and bots also belong to the ecosystem (...) Supernova = we (all), an ecological collective identity.

VIII. S-2.0 arises on the basis of art, constituting both - its effect, product, and continuum. It is a proposal of a postcapitalist view on the art market and its status, as well as on the situation of people creating it. S-2.0 is a proposal for a series of shifts in thinking about art artifacts: non-material facts and ephemeral situations are valid effects in art history and are equally benefactors of the trans/action, as well as its material equivalents. I suggest collecting living art (inter alia Allegro / ONE-HOUR MEETING WITH NOVA), created by living artists and unconditional sharing of resources.

IX. The mediums are an encounter and identity (here: *supernova 2.0): archipelago; islands inhabited by choice (identity is also an island), not island not.

X. Further development of S-2.0 will result from ecological conversations and/or meetings in which each and every person may participate and which may start here novatransakcja@gmail.com

* Let's check James Lovelock's brilliant ideas and remarks, especially those included in „Novacen. The Coming Age of Hyperintelligence” and „Novacen. The Coming Age Of Hyperintelligence”.

concept, manifesto, eco identity, 2020

business card, 200 copies print on ecological recycled paper

The business card is a symbolic artifact, proof of a professional function within the artistic / business market. In this case, its basic function - referring to existing works, products for sale or artistic portfolio - is skipped in favor of an invitation to be involved in a new participatory, process-based, art project. The business card is a prolegomena of the new identity of Supernova 2.0 and the new participatory action of the artist — one-hour ecological meetings and talks in the format of 1:1, in which Everyone can participate.

During the meetings, the issues of individual, anthropocentric bio-crises and the potential model identity of novacen — as if supernova 2.0 — will be discussed with the use of biowords / bio-events and other forms of communication.

identity, 2018

self-portrait, photography 60 x 60 animation film video frame <https://vimeo.com/416753024>

Newly born identity (pursuant to the decision of the Registry Office on April 5, 2018). Autothematic and self-reflective, capable of making intelligence-based interspecific interactions, a self-renewing creative being, subjectable to all verifications. Nova is a secondary self-construct, created as a personality palimpsest based on the strategy of habituation, distancing, lack of faith in definitiveness and belief in the human abilities of reconstruction. Nova is the effect (product?) of Nova (Maria Nova); s_he is a subject and an object at the same time, inherent in the artist's body / person. It is a beginning of a new, legally established identity, open unto interference of people and events.

NOVA 0.0.0.0. identity's manifesto framed decision from the Registry Office in Cracow, archiv 2018

NOVA 0.0.0.0., ID card

The project / identity NOVA 0.0.0.0. has a processual character and is situated between a concept (utopia) and a series of real gestures and interferences in the subject. It is a custom-related and formal experiment. It began with the planned procedure of changing my personal data, from the gesture of officially changing my family name in the Registry Office in Cracow to the surname of Nova and, by this act, starting a new house or line — this gesture, made as an esthetic gesture, is an act of creation. Then, the project was followed by a series of manifestations in the form of public presentations, long-term or cyclical performances and ritual activities in the frame of everyday life.

The project is an attempt to rewrite the self and, through self-constitution, treating the identity / „I” as a medium. It is also an attempt to explore identity as a socio-cultural and eco-political construct, envisioning a model human identity (~as if supernova 2.0) and then entering through the scope of aesthetics and reflecting on this medium (identity being this medium): do we possess sufficient terminology to describe contemporary phenomena in art?

The work is part of an MA diploma prepared at the Faculty of Intermedia, Academy of Fine Arts in Cracow.

Mova

Changing a surname in Poland is only possible for a few specific reasons — when the surname carried is ridiculous, when it causes administrative problems or when it is different from the surname used.

The surname „Nova” is one of the more popular surnames in the world. It is also a very commonly used name. Due to the notation with the „v” letter, which, in Poland, is most commonly used when the etymology of the word is foreign, means, however, Nova isn’t so prevalent on a national scale.

Art. 4. [Acceptable reasons for changing the name or surname]

1. The name or surname may be changed only for important reasons, in particular when they concern changes:

- 1) name or surname causes ridicule or doesn't obtain human dignity;
- 2) the first or last name used;
- 3) the first or last name that has been unlawfully changed;
- 4) the name or surname worn in accordance with the provisions of the law of the country of which

But we do not know yet, what will be the decision.
Maybe it will be negative...

Śmiszek-Nova, surname changing, video documentation
<https://vimeo.com/346247728>

The identity NOVA 0.0.0.0, created by me, is on the border between fiction and reality, it is a form of alter ego, but the gestures accompanying its establishment are political and formal; image — authentic. „Nova” is extremely real and / or extremely artificial. My motivations for creating the character oscillated between, one, an attempt to deepen reflection on how a construct as subtle as identity — the resultant of political, socio-cultural, genetic and economic factors — can become verifiable, and two, the desire to subject the „I” to the experiment, to abandon the well-established image in favor of an aesthetic and creative experience. At the fictional level, however, it is an attempt to rethink and visualize the fantasy about an ideal human (0), create a model or an archetype of a perfect human, or more precisely — their identity: a person beyond the boundaries of gender, culture, socio-political conditions, capable of an ecological attitude and communication, the model identity of novacen (the epoch which, according to James Lovelock, follows the Anthropocene). One of the other important motivations for the work is a reflection on the human desire for perfection and the constant pursuit of it as a kind of utopia of everyday life, although, with the simultaneous potential of its implementation in the form of a hybrid: cyborg, AI. So what are the consequences of being able to „choose your identity”, to program it mechanically? I intend to work on expanding the project and research it with more technologically advanced elements, based on artificial intelligence, as part of further studies, the prolegomenon of which is the recently created text, a manifesto of an ~ as if SUPERNOVA 2.0 - ecological collective identity.

Allegro auctions

Originally, the work consists of twenty-six auctions on Allegro, including „ONE-HOUR MEETING WITH NOVA”, „ONE-DAY MEETING WITH NOVA”, „ONE-WEEK MEETING WITH NOVA” and „ONE-MONTH MEETING WITH NOVA” and a form that was created on Google Drive for any potential buyer. The work was created in April 2019 in response to a proposal from the organizers of the KRAKERS Cracow Art Week 2019 festival, addressed to all artists participating in the festival. Its subject was the possibility of putting up one’s own works at an auction of contemporary art, organized by representatives of KRAKERS and Allegro.

The prices of the meetings with „Nova” on Allegro were inspired by the minimum wage per hour for work in Poland in 2019 (PLN 14.70) and the most-expensive-sold work in the history of art (USD 300 million; the painting „Nafea faa ipoipo” Paul Gaugin) and ranged from PLN 14.70 to PLN 147,000 million.

The work provokes the question of the categories: „collecting” or „archiving” in the context of hybrid artistic works created on the border of media and new genres of work and investigating their market potential.

INHABITING WHITE. Residing-in-the-self and trips with a beast | (utopian ritual) ready-made NOVA costum, experience, ritual, story, 2019-2020

Since July 2019 I have been actually wearing one outfit, the costume of NOVA 0.0.0.0. The costume was supposed to be specially designed and sewn, but I FOUND it at night on the street in the capital of Serbia. It was laying abandoned, by the wall next to the market square. I took it, not without doubt, although it was in fact exactly what I wanted: a white, shiny, kimono-coat, the right size: ~perfect, in someway.

So, I took it in order to then lose, abandon, find and accept it again... There was a label inside with the inscription: > AVON< 100 % polyester. What remained was the ecology of facts. It was to be my home, this costume, and my daily ritual: whiteness of white [by hand] and in-residing [residing-in-the-self]: this is what defined the course of days which lasted forever [in places, there, subtle and wild, moist].

The costume became, for me, a real home, the only unchanging artifact during my nomadic journey around Europe.

“The emptiness was a luxury”

There was a series of manifestations in the form of cyclical or long-lasting performances, as well as rituals in personal and everyday life, which accompanied the project of NOVA 0.0.0.0. I undertook a series of activities aimed at checking the possibility of approaching the symbolic zero (ideal state?) in various spheres of life, including the material one. Just before leaving the country and going on a nomadic trip around Europe, I attempted to say goodbye to *n e e d l e s s things and reduce myself to only one suitcase for all necessities. My goal was to bring my wardrobe to... one costume. Wearing the Nova 0.0.0.0. costume, which, since the closing of the Hiatus / #11011 exhibition, was my only outfit, conveying a simple message: buy consciously, think whether you really need this (new) thing, how many things / clothes do you really need? What is the function of wearing clothes? And, to determine whether daily / frequent change of clothes is an unwritten social requirement; further, are we aware of the broader context of our everyday, seemingly trivial, consumption decisions, including their environmental consequences (the clothing industry is second in the ranking of the most polluting industries),. What performative importance is there in having to constantly appear in the same costume-uniform?

Wearing one, white, costume and wanting to keep it in its perfect, intact form (whiteness), forced me to develop a strategy for its daily care, it has also become a field for daily exercise and mindfulness practice.

11111, performance, Cracow Art Week Krakowskie, Cracow 2019

11111, 11110, 11109, 11108, 11107, 11106, 11105... backwards. Foot by foot. In focus. Dressed in white, the woman covers the distance of 11111 feet in 30 minutes. This is what separates her from the basket, which will lift her 90 meters up... JUMP (...) A woman is for a moment a small point trying to control her body. She only manages it sometimes. The jerks are strong and put her body into a strange uncoordinated dance. Hands, head and torso fly in different directions at moments of jerking. Only the legs, tied to the rope, move in unison but sluggishly. Everything happens in the air, against the blue cloudless sky. Slowly, the dance of the body calms down and the woman touches the ground.

site-specific installation, 2019

Hiatus, archive, 2019

Maria Nova's ongoing art project explores body representation in a process of identity transformation through the self-created character NOVA 0.0.0.0. The project started by the act of legally changing her last name to Nova and by this act of dis-identification challenging institutional practices for care and governance of her body. Meaning produced this way is inherently political. These self-reflections are interwoven with contemplation on the ethereal and fragile nature of self-identity, that can be seen as something fluid and sensitive to changes, placed on a body as a limitation of theorising of itself. The act has given the artist an opportunity to develop theoretical tools to rethink (own body), corpo-reity. Teresa Macri noted, "These alterations, that the body meets, oust its identity and redefine a mutant subjectivity" (The Postorganic body, 1996.), and perhaps moving away from human condition and getting closer to the essence of existence.

Hiatus is a site-specific project. The exhibition is divided into three spaces / rooms. In the first, the documentation of the NOVA 0.0.0.0. project was presented, in the second, an installation and performance entitled Hiatus, and the third, my temporary home, was a space for creation: I lived in the gallery space for 11,011 minutes (7.5 days), in order not to leave the place during the entire duration of the project and, as a process, create an exhibition.

Taking the time of formation as a laboratory, also a laboratory of myself, I adopted some specific, restrictive rules that made it a cleansing and transformation experience as well — I decided that during this time I will not eat food and only drink water. With the exception of the gallery opening hours, during which I guided the visitors around the exhibition by myself, it was also a time of retreat. For the rest of the time, it was possible to observe the process through the gallery windows, and after it was closed, every day at 9 p.m., in the partially glass object I had built, I performed a ritual performance Hiatus, which could be watched through the gallery windows.

„The material chosen by the artist, glass, serves not so much to >expose< (the body / subject / ego / self / I), but to symbolize it, or more precisely, it is the space of the experiment. This is supposed to be a living laboratory, where something is happening: something is grown, something disappears.”

So, I was born. Shamelessly, having defeated armies of enemies.
The road to being my shape was long and abundant: it is certain under the skin: carnal.

I was pupating slowly, it was May 27, 1989, late afternoon (5pm). I break through my mother's membrane with undulating body movements: I can't walk, I don't know languages, no colors.
In the place where I am it is bright, this is pure light, I cannot see anything, I start to slither... I move, I slide into the crack: here
I am, I exist, I am a snake.

My body is oblong, winding, curvy, stretchy, flaccid, soft, hard, slippery, alluring — I am a snake of the earth.

MARRIAGE VOW 0

videoinstallation

Marriage Vow, video frame

videoinstallation

<https://vimeo.com/343936148>

Vow 0 is a manifesto, a promise (or a desire for a promise), given primarily to the on-looker and to myself, and at the same time a gesture of going beyond language / meaning / (im)possibility. The image shows a mouth, saying a fragment of the vows declared during the marriage ceremony in Polish Civil Registry Offices: „I vow for you love, faithfulness and honesty and I will not leave you until death.” Depriving the image of sound deprives the spoken words of content: does >a promise< as such exist? Is it, as a linguistic being, possible? Doesn't the promise of love and fidelity, even if made to oneself, contain an aspect of the im/possible? There remains only the movement of lips, the choreography of lips, saying words with no meaning, excluded from linguistic reality.

The subject of the work is the opposition between performativity (pertinence) and the conventionality of language, inspired by the theory of performative acts of speech by John L. Austin, and by reality. According to Austin's theory, there are speech acts that have the power to change reality. In Austin's dissertations, the most frequently used example is the words of a marriage vow, which – according to his argumentation – expressed in certain circumstances, have the power to change reality (establishing reality through the word): on the strength of words, two people become husband and wife („I make you husband and wife”). On the other hand, the promise contained in the language is purely conventional / symbolic.

performance site-specific, happening, ritual, seance 2017

/video documentation 3'12"/

TRIPTYCH is a work consisting of three events, the first of which takes place underground (at the bottom of a well) – from UNDER, second: above the ground or on a hill – UP (!), third: at the boundary of the Earth's surface – inBETWEEN, where the Earth appears as element but also as mother.

TRYPTYK is a discourse with space-time (past, potentiality, between, vertical, horizontal) and the elements, including the „element“ of the medium in which it is expressed. On the one hand, it is a personal journey, on the other — an autothematic reflection, because the initiation that takes place concerns the action itself: it is its own funeral — the funeral of the performance that is happening.

Performance, when taking an established, already tamed shape (because the author [!] directly reproduces or refers to gestures of other performers: „classics of performance art“ including Zbigniew Warpechowski, Jerzy Bereś or Marina Abramović), as opposed to shapeless, aleatoric, unplanned, but „spontaneous“ action, made with the intention of initiation and the energy of the beginning as a performance. The second part of the work (UP!) is an aleatoric happening conceived as the act of initiating something in a process, without a specific shape and thus, containing full potential.

The sequence of the initiatory and ritual „melodramatic“ /?/ actions, inspired by the impossibility of words — in this case the words of a marriage vow; failure of the theory of the performative acts of speech of John L. Austin and the story of self-exposure (in the history of art); motivated by (1) the promise made in the dream to Alejandro Jodorovsky, (2) unceasing love for Marcel Duchamp, and (3) the desire to abandon the current image for the Nova-identity.

Among Lolo (one of the minorities in South China, which maintains good relations mainly with Tibetans), there is a legend about the beginning of the world — there were two hens: white and black. Each of them abolished nine eggs, which made bad people and good people.

2.

„It was a great fiesta, a ceremony during which the forces of darkness freed themselves from the trap to fight the forces of light. On the battlefield, angels and beasts faced each other. (...) I was aware that I was going in the direction of death, that it would be a ritual of transformation “

FAMILY SELF-PORTRAIT OUTDOORS

video, seance, experience, story, performative installation, 2018

Family self-portrait outdoors, video frames

The film presents a series of genre scenes from the life of my interspecies family. Its members are Lumière the cat, Felicjan and Supernova, the cockerels, and a ficus plant, Benjamin. The work is an attempt to register mutual dependencies and connections — domination, mechanisms of power and control — in the contemporary non-heteronormative family, from an outside perspective. The title of the film is a parallel to the title of Luchino Visconti's well-known work, „Portrait of a Family in the Interior” (mostly translated to Conversation Piece), but the story from „Self-Portrait ...” (Nova family) goes beyond the story presented in the film, becoming an authentic experience, not only a film arrangement.

PIEŚŃ I trailer nieistniejącego filmu
<https://vimeo.com/342162056>

An experimental film project on the boundary of performance, video art, reality experience. The film was made based on the script entitled „A song”, which is also a genre hybrid, oscillating between the poem, the literary collage and the film drama. It consists of dialogues led by a pair of people close to each other people, WOMAN and MAN, whose conversation goes beyond their relationship: they talk to themselves, to the camera (camera-viewer), to the interior of the medium. In the film, this relationship becomes multidirectional, because real people from my life were invited to participate in the project, people with whom I have or had close contact with: partners, loves, friends, lovers of the past or — in the case of their absence — souvenirs from being with them; creating a hybrid of radical masculinity, eroticism and languages. The project is therefore both, a formal and emotional experiment and, at the same time, an attempt to engage in a dialogue looking at the stereotypes associated with building and maintaining relationships, as well as social roles and consents connected with it: perceived as masculine or feminine. It is a utopian attempt to go beyond language, towards experience. It is a document about our contemporary times: about love, about the impossibility of love, about the impossibilities of language, about loneliness in a multidirectional system of love and language games and events.

O

videostory, installation, 2016

This film is part of a video installation entitled „O”, presented as a solo exhibition. The title of the film and installation is the graphic sign of a circle. It is a work in progress: a form of manifesto, the beginning of an expression. Instead of creating a story, I propose experience, together with everything that it carries: pleasure, excitement, boredom.

This represents an attempt of freeing history from narration and the transition from word and image as tools for telling a story, to the experience of the structure of history that is happening, lasting, and where „end” is simultaneously the „beginning”.

O, video frames
<https://vimeo.com/345164182>

„O” by Maria Śmiszek was created against all declarations of the end, in spite of the extreme discourses undertaken in the last century: history, philosophy, art, and even man. „O” is created regardless of the accumulating rubble of history. It’s walking towards that twilight.

„History is made,” says the voice of this work. The history that we are getting to know here has no end and will never comprehend its end, and it is in this sense that it is infinite (looped like a voice) and as such escaping cognition (washed away by new sensations).

We are dealing here with a special type of site-specific installation: the grass on the gallery floor makes us experience this space - empty, with white walls - differently than before. What is trampled and crushed beneath your feet suddenly becomes a condition of experience. It reveals, as an object of history, its complicated layered structure, literally the ground, the place where history is born hic et nunc, never any other time. A story living its own life, disposing of narratives that stop this eternal circle, pulsation, looping.

The very figure of a loop, revealed in the title, expresses a longing for presence, for completeness, for a state in which you want for nothing; in this state, nothing else needs to be solved or understood, for everything is solved and perfectly understood. On the other hand, we could say: it’s zero. Or the entrance. Leading to the source of the life-giving experience. Its desire, its absence, drives the wheel of history. A Story.

What is a st-o-ry? A story that has no end so that it cannot succeed? Does it come full circle or fail? Or maybe by surprising us („oh!”), It knocks us out of the ruts of narrative forms? Maria Śmiszek is ironic about the great historical narratives that are left behind - the armies have passed, the armies are yet to come - only trampled fields, rubble and dead bodies. The story is here, it begins at your feet, it waits at the doorstep. „Come in.”

I DON'T HAVE ANY TIME TO LOSE – pacing piece long durational performance 12 h, 2018

The second performance in the series „I don't have any time to lose”, realized as part of the Online Performance Art Festival, is a 12-hour walk around Berlin, during which, thanks to the connection with Google Maps and an application for drawing a route, I enter the word „FORCE” in the city map. My path is defined by the order of the letters. No mapping out the route contributed to any inadvertent breaking of laws and arrest by the police (force) and, consequently, the necessity to choose another path, which could be observed in the letter „F”.

When walking, I followed the principle of „keep walking”; I had twelve envelopes prepared with a link to the performance and the phrase „keep walking” written on each, which I would hand out on the hour, every hour, at random, to different people, without any additional explanation.

Walkings with Felicja han, archive 2017
<https://vimeo.com/344630143>

Felicja, meaning „happy.” Here: the one that has not finished up in the broth (in Poland, the obligatory dish served on Sunday’s lunch), was what we manifested during our Sunday walks, that we took in the Old Town, in Krakow. The price for saving her life was an adaptation to new conditions. Fela took up residence in one of the Cracow tenement houses on Lea Street with myself, MT, Lumière’s cat and several plants, including two ficuses benjamins. In the kitchen by the balcony, there was a wooden chicken coop arranged for her.

Walking with Felicja and the experience of sharing a living space with her aroused a lot of emotions. McDonald’s environs aroused the most critical, underbelly point. Our walks turned out to be devastating.

Appendix:

The Cracow period of Fela’s life ended with a tragic separation of all household members (I would add that according to Chinese folklore imagery, the black chicken is said to shoo away evil spirits...). Felicja went to my father’s garden, where, until her disappearance, she led — if not a happy life — at least a frivolous one, laying very exclusive ecological eggs. Meanwhile, I moved into Felicjanek street.

With the beginning of March 2017, I started to live on Felicjanek Street, which was my thirteenth home and thirteenth residence in Cracow. In the face of this, my latest change of residence and, together, with a life-changing moment in my personal circumstances, I decided to explore the topic of strangeness and loneliness in the urban space. I undertook the FELICJANEK STREET PROJECT in the name of the neoutopian idea of creating a local community in the city centre, on Felicjanek Street, which for many of its residents (tourists, foreign students, locals) is a transitional place, a nomadic space, but for many a place inhabited for years, from generation to generation. Residents living in neighbouring houses remain strangers to each other despite sharing the „common courtyard“.

A 24-hour action, consisting in reading the content of James Joyce's „Ulysses” in a „mechanical”, extra-linguistic way, treating the undertaken challenge as a kind of physical, endurance performance, no longer intellectual in nature.

The action took place on the anniversary date on which Ulysses takes place, June 16, 2017. From the read pages of the book, an installation is created, which consists of the pages of the novel, and at the end of the action there was an artefact in the form of a book with no beginning; half empty.

and it was Polish the meat,

<https://vimeo.com/345125087>

1.

The work was inspired by an experience I had in the summer of 2017, at my temporary job on the German island of Rügen. On the day known as the „Schnitzeltag“ one could eat a huge schnitzel for a symbolic „seven and fifty“ — 400 grams of meat with potatoes and cucumber salad, which increased the number of customers for restaurant on this day almost fivefold.

2.

However, the quality of the products served at the restaurant were questionable. The unique layout for this day and the placement strategy that was utilised was in order to get maximum profit, they were selling the unidentifiable, semi-finished products, dishes that are often highly processed, with a lot of chemical additives and flavour-enhancers, often fatty and mainly meat. It was the first time I saw cardboard scrambled eggs there. It was also the first time that I had encountered shades of nationalism imposed upon workers of various origins: they were stripped of names and nationality. However, it was the case that people with obesity constituted a significant percentage of the clients.

3.

Being enveloped in such a destructive work environment and serving dozens of schnitzels that took up the entire plate, I felt overwhelmed by the thought of eating even one schnitzel (although I do not eat meat), but before I could, I left the place.

The obsessive thought about schnitzel came back to me in the form of a trauma-image on my return to Poland. The planned ritual of meat eating has expanded to include a Polish context, the political context and the questions I have asked myself during the dynamically changing situation in Poland: about nationality, Polishness, politics, the political nature of art, the obligation of art to be political, the status and future of Poland, and finally — food: the politics of food.

5.

Amaranth (chemistry) — an organic chemical compound from the group „azodyes“ is a synthetic, non-granular, dark red foodstuff tar, forbidden in some countries. It has a strong resistance to high temperature and light. It is mainly used for the production of cosmetics (e.g. lipsticks, cosmetic blushes). Although this dye has been withdrawn from use in food products, it can still be found in, amongst other things: cakes and jellies, breakfast cereals, non-alcoholic and low-grade alcoholic beverages, caviar and blackcurrant products. Amaranth can cause side effects typical of azodyes. It can affect fertility, the liver and the kidneys. Consumed by pregnant women, it can cause birth defects. In the Table of Additives and Chemical Ingredients, B. Statham is indicated as a carcinogen.

SEXY MF

performance, instalacja, choreografia, 2015

Body, Teatr Studio w Warszawie, foyer

SEXY MF is a performative installation that asks which social identities we really are: a woman and a man, an artist and a spectator. Face characterization, which conveys sex characteristics that are different from the rest of the body and can disturb the standard exchange of glances. In order to escape from the impression of illusion, the viewer has to decide what and who to see.

Fragment of review

Throughout the interaction, performers make eye contact, seduce and tempt with their gaze, small gestures, such as open lips and suggestive touching of their bodies. Erotic intention is kept constant, its intensity does not decrease. (...) In the public space, twelve intimate spaces are created, subject to constant observation by one participant in each space, with others who do not interact directly, the spectator-performer border is abolished; we are all objects from which the installation was composed.

Remember me. Natalia Cikowska talks to Maria Nova

The atmosphere is amazing. It's October, but it's warm like June. I am just sitting on the terrace in the studio of a Berlin artist, where I stop a while. I have a view of the TV tower: a very strange object. It isn't obvious whether to admire it or, perhaps, better leave its vicinity: such an intense eye, staring at the heart of Europe.

Recently I returned to the album „Bright Red” by Laurie Anderson and I listen to it endlessly in the context of trying to go beyond the language... In one of the songs: „World Without End”, Laurie sings „I remember all my lovers”... This project [„A Song”] really forced me to remember all the Persons with whom I have ever been connected. From the sand pit.

Natalia Cikowska: Even those you don't want to remember?

Maria Nova: Yes...

NC: It must have been difficult.

MN: Why do you think we wouldn't want to remember some people, when they are still a part of us? Sometimes I think of these People as time lost, however, I quickly regain the belief that these relations were necessary somehow.

NC: You're changing your name.

MN: I already have...

NC: You absolutely are... Nova. It sounds like an initiation. Who is Maria Nova and why was it created? What is the NOVA 0.0.0.0. project?

MN: First of all, I remember when sending me questions, you indicated we didn't have to use the old surname of mine in print, if I didn't want to. Just now, I can't see any reason for that. I liked my „old” surname, I think it is very characteristic and I (did) identify with it in some way (Śmiszek means, this one, who laughs a lot), sometimes by contrast ... My new name has a formal character, it is not an erasure, or if so, via palimpsest, like in the „Erased drawing of Koonig” ... But the name changing procedure and its effects could suggest deletion, because when you change your name at the Registry Office, the family name also changes. It means that in this act I started the Nova family.

Returning, to answer your question, however: I'm creating. I concocted myself anew / again / and over again. Do you think it's possible? To abandon yourself, to distance yourself from your identity?

Nova is a regenerative identity, something like a self-healing process that can, by will, occur in the body. It is a palimpsest (imposition), a desire to see what happens when I suddenly abandon myself: my image, things, space.

I want to see identity as matter, something tensile, changeable. The question I am asking is: to what extent identity / personality could become something elastic, something that can be manipulated, become a material – matter that can be moved. It is, above all, a belief in the >possible<, in the reconstructive possibilities of man. However, I carry out the experiment on myself, I become the laboratory, the „I“ subject with all the „benefits“ of inventory. By „I“, I also mean the body: an object in space, a vertical line [I]: the chronic and obsessive „I“ that is constantly circling us.

However, 0.0.0.0. is an IP address that works on the principle of error ... NOVA is also a wedding, the most important wedding in life (Wedding 0): an oath given to yourself, a promise of fidelity... and at the same time an attempt to confront the institution, the Office of Registry, because it takes place in this office, the changing of the name (which is possible only for a few reasons).

Nova is also a dedication to my father (Maria Nova — Marian's daughter), whose personality I became fascinated with. Well, Dad does not have a professional education, he is not a scholar / academic. I think it is the reason why he seems closer to what I am striving for in a roundabout way, through language. It is interesting that he intuitively uses concepts that belong to aesthetics and art history („look what installation I have made from these pumpkins“ — he would say). I am fascinated by his unwavering boldness, unpretentiousness and grace: „keep filming me“ — he'd say, „film this flower, this watering can for me“: I envy him for this, I would love to invite him to work together on an installation and I hope that happens some time soon...

NC: At the moment, there is an exhibition in Bunkier Sztuki entitled „Can you feel it?“ which shows, among other things, the film „Song | trailer of a non-existent film“ based on your concept and script, in which „as you“, you appear and meet your former lovers ...

MN: Yes. This film was made as part of Didactic Gallery, run by dr. Roman Dziadkiewicz, as part of the 'cooperation program' with the AMA film school. The idea of making a „film” interested me for a long time as an opportunity to try out the medium and to test its „performative” potential. I proposed a way of thinking about film (a film-performance) to the group, contributing a specific script, that we decided to produce. I would like to point out right away that the text was not fully executed, and even, during the production process, I had to rewrite the dialogues based on my original script. What happened on set, the field where we were shooting, a live, authentic meeting, turned out to somehow go beyond the script.

NC: What's „Song” about? You wrote about the impossibilities of language and communication.

MN: Yes, lately I am more and more inclined to the fact that communication using words is a kind of „utopia”, that we are such lingual orbits...

Well, there are two characters in the script: male and female, kind of archetypes. They have a conversation — with each other, with themselves, with a camera/viewer. The stage directions say only that they are naked, the script is „clean”, aesthetic. When we decided to make „Song”, we immediately started looking for specific dramatic solutions for it, to get out of the 60th avant-garde aesthetic, which the script can represent as text. We fantasized. Then the idea came up to invite real characters to the project: all the men from a woman's life, to extend the male character on more people. We decided to work on my (love) autobiography...

NC: How did the people invited by you to the project react?

MN: Let me start by saying that one of the most important problems for me that came up during the whole process was, simply, the definition of a Man. To invite „all men” to the project, but who is this „man”?

The people involved in the project are those who agreed to take part and then reached the

無

The people involved in the project are those who agreed to take part and then physically arrived on the set (!): the sports ground. When I got the first positive answer, I was very happy and surprised at the same time. I was confident that no one would agree; that it is simply impossible for someone to agree — especially people really close or they whom, for example, I only contacted for the first time after 10 years, or, someone I knew only very briefly...

NC: You are portraying a certain type of woman: the liberated one, dancing on the field in a red costume among her former lovers. This is the opposite of the popular stereotype of a woman who is conquered by someone. What was the intention of the whole undertaking?

MN: One of my lovers confessed to me that he had about 20 women in his life. According to stereotypes, women want love and men want sex, „I guess sex was less important to you than it was to me,” the same man told me. [...] According to stereotypes, men have, can have, many sexual experiences and this is natural in their case. Moreover and above all: we live in a time where long-term relationships are a rarity. They were replaced by a more changeable culture, the endless need for new stimuluses, stimulants in frame of casual / non-committal relationships, as well as emotional laziness: it seems easier to make a new acquaintance, change partner, withdraw, than to face the difficulties of a truly mature, deep relationship (statistics). People want love, but they cannot love each other. This project is both — a formal and emotional experiment, but also a document about the present day (see: „Liquid Love”, Z. Bauman): about love, about the impossibility of love, about the impossibilities of language. The intention is to change beliefs; a self-ironic, critical look at self, at femininity / masculinity / a kind of cultivated hypocrisy [unmasking] / of the present, at the difficulty of relationships and loneliness in omnidirectional systems of love-linguistic connections, games and events ... I would like to mention in this moment a fragment of an article by Joanna Dec-Pietrowska and Agnieszka Walendzik-Ostrowska, which I just came across, and which seems to me to be an important and rightful voice. Will you let me? I quote:

A „decent woman” should only have one sexual partner, while a „real man” should have sexual experience. A woman who changes partners is said to „not respect herself”, about a man - that he „has to let off steam”. The terms for a rich sexual life of a woman are pejorative, in the case of a man rather playful, often tinged with appreciation for his achievements. According to an unwritten social contract, men have the right to free and unfettered sexual contact, while women have a duty to be virtuous (until marriage) and faithful (after marriage). Those that behave differently, against the rules of the contract, are described as easy, without rules, immoral, sloppy. Their character is often described as promiscuous / wanton, which quickly brings to mind prostitution. There is a dichotomous division of women into „saints” and „harlots” in the social consciousness. The former are the so-called real women: virtuous, sexless, modest (spoken and dressed), faithful to one partner, passively waiting, sexually active only to be able to get pregnant. The so-called hookers are those who are interested in sex, enjoy it, change partners and are active in their search.

Another topic that I wanted to address through this project is the theme of the me too campaign and my, as it seems, quite peculiar position towards it, which assumes the absurdity of the one-sided accusations that are made there ... But this is a longer topic. Perhaps it is better to talk about it live (...).
